So please, parents, see to it that your child doesn't sit while adults stand. Seat him on your knees or have him hang on to a chair-grip near you.

Your fellow passengers will appreciate it.

Are women different?

Not according to one member of the French Chamber of Deputies.

He felt strongly that French men and women should have equal rights under the law and fought hard to get a bill passed by the Chamber.

"Messieurs," he said, "it is obvious that France should have such a law. In olden times it was perhaps appropriate that men should possess more rights than women.

"But today? Non! Women vote, they make their own living, there is now very little difference between the sexes —"

At this point, the speaker was interrupted by a colleague at the back of the chamber.

"All that may be true," he said gravely. "But I would just like to say to the Hon. Member — for myself at least—'Vive la difference!'"

There was some little difficulty, we understand, in restoring order.

* * *

We're much in sympathy with the fellow who interrupted. We like the ladies just the way they are, with no nonsense about trying to legislate improvements.

No, no!

But—if you twist our arm—there is one small item we wish the gals would remember . . .

Please—on bended knees we ask you—please, ladies, HAVE THE RIGHT CHANGE READY WHEN YOU BOARD THE BUS!

Contest Extended

We're extending the deadline on the Buzzer's Photo Contest for the best picture of the Last Run of the old Oak Street cars.

A number of people told us—a couple of them in no uncertain terms—that they wanted to enter but just couldn't meet the deadline. So we're putting the deadline forward to Monday, May 19th, to accommodate them.

That means there's time, now, for your entry to get in and compete for one of the eight cash prizes . . . $20 for first prize; $10 for second; $5 each for third and fourth; and four honorable-mention prizes of $2.50 apiece.

Those are attractive prices for a snapshot, and yours could win! So if you took a picture of one or more of the cars on the Last Run . . . or a picture of a boy or girl waving with the cars going by (or any incident with the cars an incidental part of the snapshot) shoot it along and try for the pay-off!

Don't forget to enclose your name and address . . . and a self-addressed stamped envelope if you wish your entry returned.

PICK OF THE Pictures at the neighbourhood theatres

By Clyde Gilmour

Callaway Went Thataway: The wacky events that befall an innocent cowpoke in Hollywood—all because he's a dead ringer for a vanished old-time star whose popularity has suddenly been revived on television. A brisk and amusing comedy, even if the satire at times might have run a little deeper. Howard Keel, Fred MacMurray and Dorothy McGuire are in the good cast.

My Favorite Spy: Currently showing in two suburban theatres, this is a pretty fair sample of that standard Hollywood commodity, the Bob Hope farce. He turns up in a dual role as a leering international scoundrel and a bumbling American clown, with Hedy Lamarr the femme fatale in his escapade.

Room for One More: Highly suitable for a visit by the entire family, this is a domestic comedy-drama about a married pair (Cary Grant and Betsy Drake) who can't resist offering shelter to any bruised waif who comes knocking at their door, although they already have a considerable brood of their own.

New Dept.

We take pleasure now in introducing to you a new feature in The Buzzer: A few paragraphs every week or two on how various streets in town came to get their names. Jim Nesbitt, veteran correspondent in the B.C. Legislature, takes time out from his newspaper and radio duties to root out the historical data and then writes out the story in his own winning style.

Hope you like 'em!

Here's the first of the series, telling the story behind . . .

Seymour Street

Seymour Street, one of the principal thoroughfares of downtown Vancouver, was named for His Excellency Frederick Seymour, early-day Royal Governor of British Columbia.

An Englishman, Seymour

first came to B.C. in 1864 as Governor of the Crown Colony of British Columbia, the capital at New Westminster. There was also then a Crown Colony of Vancouver Island, the capital at Victoria.

In 1866 the two colonies were merged as the Crown Colony of British Columbia, the capital in New Westminster, and so Seymour lived there. In 1868, after a long and bitter battle between New Westminster and Victoria, the Island city won, became the capital, has so remained ever since. In '68 Seymour left New Westminster and took up residence in Victoria, at old Cary Castle, B.C.'s first Government House, destroyed by fire in 1898.

In June of 1869 Governor Seymour took a cruise north in H.M.S. Sparrowhawk. A few days after leaving Esquimalt he died suddenly aboard Sparrowhawk at Bella Coola. He was 47. There was a state funeral in Victoria and burial was in the picturesque naval cemetery in the old-world, seaside village of Esquimalt.

About Offspring

We've been receiving complaints that a good many small children are occupying seats while the grown-ups stand.
